

Stage 1 Burn Ban Lifted

VANCOUVER, Wash. – Due to overnight winds and improving air quality, the Southwest Clean Air Agency (SWCAA) is removing the Stage 1 Burn Ban called for Lewis County effective 10:00 AM on December 14, 2009. The long term weather forecast indicates conditions that will provide good ventilation in Southwest Washington. We encourage the public to always utilize good combustion practices when using wood combustion devices. Outdoor burning is again allowed in areas where burning has not been permanently banned provided that you have a burn permit. Please check with SWCAA or your local Fire Department for allowed locations and fire danger conditions prior to burning.

We would like to extend our gratitude and appreciation to those who cooperated with this curtailment. SWCAA is sensitive to the hardship this Stage 1 Burn Ban may have placed on people in these times of increased economic burden. Thank you – we cannot do this without your help.

For more information about cleaner wood burning techniques, please visit www.swcleanair.org/burnclean.html. To sign up to receive e-mail notifications of these wood stove curtailment burn bans, visit www.swcleanair.org. To receive Air Pollution Advisories from Oregon DEQ, visit www.deq.state.or.us/aq/advisories.

Founded in 1968, the mission of the Southwest Clean Air Agency is to preserve and enhance the air quality in southwest Washington. Serving the counties of Clark, Cowlitz, Lewis, Skamania and Wahkiakum, SWCAA is responsible for protecting the public's health through the enforcement of federal, state and local air quality standards and regulations.

#

For more information contact:

Robert Elliott, Executive Director
Southwest Clean Air Agency
360-574-3058
bob@swcleanair.org

Kathy Finkle, Public Information Specialist
Southwest Clean Air Agency
360-574-3058
kathy@swcleanair.org